ISLE SAINT FAMILLE CHAPEL STORY TOLD

On November 28, 1792, Lieut. Gov-MacCormick, Governor of Cape Breton Island, granted leave to two chiefs of the Micmaes, Francis Bask and Michael Timma to build Bask and Michael Himma to built'a chapel on the island of St. Villenai (obviously a mistake for St. Famile) in the Bras d'Or Lakes, about nine miles from St. Peter's, for diving worship agreeable to the rites of the Roman Catholic religion.

The chapel was dedicated to St. Anne, who doubtless as a result of the early French missionaries, is everywhere granted as the patroness of the Indians. STATUE

Its appointments are similar in character to those of the Small Ro-man Catholic Church but it also conman Cetholic Church but it also contains a statue of the good St. Annaherself which is regarded with the greatest nossible veneration by the Indians who say that it was brought out to Cana Breton by Father Mailleard himself. The statue which is apparently of wood covered with planter of paris is about "i life size representing the saint seated and instructing the Blessed Virgin, as a structing the Blessed Virgin, as structing the Blessed Virgin, as a girl, from an open book.

The figures are upon a moveable stand by a cenopy and usually occupies the position of honour on the right side of the altar.

The church that was standing in 1900 was the fifth church erected since the fall of Louisbourg under the direction of Father Maillard. The first small church was erected on the island and given the name of "lle Saint Famile", The Island of the Holy Family. Holy Family.

OLD CARVED ALTAR

The present allar is modern, but for many years their church contain-ed an old carved French allar which ed an old carved French altar which bore upon it the date 1717. It was unfortunate that some years back the Indians agreed to give the altar to the priest there stationed at Red Island. Today it is to be found in the vestry of the Sacred Heart New church. It is stated that this altar formerly belonged to the chaolain in the old French Fort at St. Peters which was then known as Port Toulouse, and when the English took the place the altar was carried off by the French and hidden in the woods and was later found and jealously guarded by the found and jealously guarded by the Indians

SACRED SPOT

There is a sacred spot on the Is-land fenced in from desecration where the good priest Father Mail-ard preached from a grantle rock, the Gospel of Christ to his beloved Indians. The rock is marked plainly by a cross cut in the stone and is surmounted by an iron cross. The prayer books used by the Indians are most interesting, their written language was arranged by Father Maillard. One of the prayer books was sent by Rev. Father Ouinan of Sydney to the poet, Longfellow.

The Rev. Thomas Wood, rector of St. Paul's Anglican Church in Halifax wrote several of the prayers of the Anglican Church into the Michael language and held services for them in the church. prayer books used by the Indians them in the church.

Abbe Maillard lived his last days in Halifax and was a great friend of Rev. T. Wood. In fact at his last in 1762, there was not a Roman Cath-olic priest at hand, so Rev. Wood was requested to read the Anglican prayers for the visitation of the sick, in the presence of a great number of French citizens of Halifax.

Upon the death of Father Maillard, the Lieut. Governor of Cape Breton and Nova Scotia ordered the remains buried in St. Pauls church vard. Rev. T. Wood performed the last rites of the church in the French language.

What are the duties and powers of the Grand Chief of the Micmac Indians?

What are the duties and powers what are the duties and powers of the Grand Councillor? What are the duties of the Grand Captain?

What are the duties of the Cap-tains appointed on each of our Re-

I am sure there is a great deal of tradition in each of the above Titles, but not too many of us really know the true meanings of the positions.

"Recently a man in Indian Education asked me, "What do you think would fur:her your education if you had to repeat your school life all over again? My reply was that 1 would have liked my parents to have seen to it that 1 had started school as soon as I was old enough and that they had made me attend and that they had made me attend school regularly so that I would have completed the work prescribed for each grade satisfactorily. I be-lieve that the school facilities available in my reserve at that time an-I my own eagerness to learn would have made a great deal of difference to my present academic standing of Grade 4."

He goes on to say that today Indian education opportunities, facilities, and stendards, on and off the reserves, are better than they ever were. He says, "... no Indian need ever wish for an education, as long as he should an heavest device for as he shows an honest desire for it. He can get help all the way. He asks:

Mother of 12 children, an Indian Lady writes;

"I feel right when I see Indian and white children going to school together. This is a wonderful thing. There have been many improvements in my lifetime but, in 10 years time, with all that is being done for our children, things will be even better than they are now. I wish I had had the chance. per cent of Indian children are already attending provincial schools. Many Indians in Canada are also receiving some other services from provincial governments.

Dealing now with the proposed agreements in respect of extension of some further provincial services to Ontario Indians, two draft agree-ments were discussed with the Onments were discussed with the On-tario Indian Advisory Council, elect-ed by the various Bands in that Pro-vince. One agreement relates to the extension of a broad range of pro-vincial welfare services, the other to the provision of community develop-the provision of community development programs.

On November 25, 1965, my predecessor, the Honourable J. R. Nicholson, sent to all provinces copies of these agreements asking if they would be prepared to enter into them. At this point the Ontario Indian Advisory Council had already agreed with the principle of the Ontario agreements on the basis that they would apply only to such Banda as specifically endorsed them.

On January 6, 1966, the office of the Ontario Minister of Welfare issued a release without notice to the sued a release without notice to the federal government. This release mistates the facts. It states in part that the agreement would take effect immediately, and 'under it the major responsibility for Indians will be taken over by the provincial govern-ment.' The statement implies further that the agreement covers a far wider field than had actually been discussed.

On January 7, 1966, a number of press accounts based on this erroneous statement appeared. The most eous statement appeared. The most widely circulated report began: 'Responsibility for the welfare of Indians in Ontario shifted dramatically Thursday to the Province from the Federal Government.' That evening the Ontario Minister appeared on national television with a similar message.

On January 8, 1966, I began to re-ceive representations in respect of this Ontario announcement. On January 10. I met with the National In-dian Advisory Board. At this meet-ing several Indian leaders expressed ing several indian leaders expressed great concern over the possibility that Ontario may seek to substitute itself for Canada in the latter's duties towards the Indian people. They asked, and I thought it proper to agree that Canada should not sign the agreement in question until the Indian representatives once again had an operativity to executive the control of Indian representatives once again had an opportunity to acquaint their people of the facts. issued by me, for the same purpose. The Indian leaders' alarm is understandable. They had not been consulted on what they took to be a complete abdication by the federal government of its responsibilities as reflected by the second second control of the second con complete adultation by the redetal government of its responsibilities as reflected by the message issued by the Ontario Minister. I told then that the government of Canada cannot, and is not, considering transferring its exclusive constitutional responsibility in respect of Indian, and that the draft agreements were not different from what they had been told by my predecessor and generally agreed to by them. This seemed satisfactory to the Indian leaders but impressions of this unfortunate sort, once formed, are hard to dispel. The Indian leaders saked that the Federal Government withhold signing the agreements with Ontario until they could review the matter. the matter.

The 200,000 Indians of Canada have some reason, out of our history, to be cautious in their commitments. We are working very closely with them now in policy development. Consultation and increased manage-ment of Indian affairs is central to this progress.

I hope that when the facts are known it will be possible to proceed again with Ontario in the extension of ordinary provincial services."
